What are we doing well?

- School packs have been great.
- Communication has been great i.e. emails.
- Work-packs for children.
- Teachers give good ideas on tapestry.
- The recent work packs were fantastic and it really excited the children to know they were from the school itself, they enjoyed doing work that mummy and daddy had got for them, but when the school packs were given out it gave them a connection back to school.

How could we provide you with more support for Home Learning?

- It's quite a lot to do with children –a lot of work.
- I understand work load is high so this would most likely be an impossible situation, but if there was some way of electronically showing the teachers the home school work so that the children could receive a little bit of teachers I put on their work perhaps. Although again, in the current climate I understand this is near enough an impossibility.

Do you have any other comments about Home Learning?

- Not related to the school, but a lot of the online work available for children, is printouts online. I currently don't have a printer so haven't been able to follow these work sites

We are planning a "Recovery" curriculum which will include the main focus areas for our pupil's needs. What do you consider to be the most important subjects to cover or focus areas, when your child returns to school in September?

Numbers, counting, letters.

Reading, maths, spelling.

Ks1.. Phonics and maths

Ks2.. Maths

We have followed and completed a lot of these areas at home, but it has come to the realisation that I teach differently to their teachers so at the beginning that caused a little confusion, and that confusion in return may happen when they return to school
